STATE PIG RACE IS ON FULL TILT

Ton Litter Contest Is Exciting Interest All Over Wisconsin.

Madison—Wisconsin's pig race is on. Entries for the 1924 ton litter contest are being received by the college of agriculture here. According to H. J. Brant, in charge of the contest, a good start has been made in the race.

So far the litters reported this spring have been of good size. Mr. Brant said. Eldon Neitz of Richland county, first entrant in the race, will compete with a litter of 11 purebred Duroc Jersey pigs. Walter Jenney, Oconto, has entered 10 pure Chester Whites. William Buelke, Sheboygan county, has 12 purebred Chester Whites with which he hopes to receive first honors.

Brant also reports a great deal of interest in this year's contest in Green Lake, Rock and Walworth counties.

RECEIVING ENTRIES IN TON LITTER RACE

Wisconsin's pig race is on. Entries for the 1924 ton litter contest are being received by the College of Agriculture here. According to H. J. Brant, in charge of the contest, a good start has been made in the race.

So far the litters reported this spring have been of good size. Eldon Neitz of Richland county, first entrant in the race, will compete with a litter of 11 purebred Duroc Jersey pigs. Walter Jenney, Oconto county, has entered 10 purebred Chester Whites. William Buelke, Sheboygan county, has 12 purebred Chester Whites with which he hopes to receive first honors.

H. D. Morgan, Fond du Lac county, believes that his 12 litter purebred Hampshires will grow faster than any other litter in the state of Wisconsin. Morgan won the Fond du Lac county ton litter contest last year with a Hampshire litter.

The largest litter qualifying last year in Wisconsin had 14 pigs and the smallest numbered nine, reports Brant. The average number of pigs per litter in Wisconsin's successful ton litters was 11.32. In Illinois it was 10.69, and in Ohio, 11.1 pigs per litter. One state last year reported several ton litters of eight pigs.

County Agent James Lacey, Green Lake county, reported a farmer who raised seven to a weight of 1,370 pounds at six months and seven days.

MILLION IS LOST IN CROP DISEASES TO BADGER FARMERS

More than $1,000,000 is lost annually in Wisconsin through blights made by preventable crop diseases. This is the estimate of plant disease experts of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture in a recently issued circular. According to them Wisconsin farmers lose nearly 1,000,000 bushels of oats a year through smut, nearly 500,000 bushels of barley through smut and stripe, and thousands of bushels of wheat and rye from preventable plant diseases.

Smut is a disease which spreads with the seed, grows inside the plant, makes black heads, reduces the yield, lowers the quality and can be killed by the formaldehyde treatment before the grain is planted. Seed grain may or may not carry smut germs. But treatment is good business and cheap insurance because it takes away one of the principal hazards of crop losses. If a farmer raised his own seed last year and it was free from smut, it might not be necessary to treat it this year, but there was some smut, even if only a fraction of 1 per cent, then he should treat the seed.

At the Wisconsin experiment station a few years ago, a sample of highly recommended oats was sent for trial. Half of this seed was treated before planting. The result was no smut where the seed was treated and 37 per cent smut where the seed was not treated.

The most effective method for Wisconsin farmers to use in treating grain, say the pathologists, is the formaldehyde seed treatment. The cost of the treatment varies with the labor available and the market price of the formaldehyde, but at the most it amounts to only a few cents a bushel. Farmers often club together and raise the cost. It pays to be on the safe side, especially when the premiums are low.

INSPECTION OF TOBACCO WAREHOUSES HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Madison—Statewide inspection of tobacco bonded warehouses in Wisconsin has just been completed and the warehouses were found to be in suitable condition for storing tobacco, according to announcement by the state department of markets.

The warehouses were inspected in the following places: Janesville, Edgerton, Stoughton, London, Deerfield, Cottage Grove, Madison, Chippewa Falls, Independence, Black River Falls, Sparta, Soldiers Grove, Viroqua, Coon Valley, Chasaburg, Genoa, Ironton, and Richland Center. Each place has from one to four warehouses. Practically all of the warehouses

COBBAN HEARING ON TWO ISSUES

Civil Service Commission to Sift "Religious and Political" Reasons.

Madison—The state civil service commission on April 9 will conduct a hearing solely on the question of whether Alex J. Cobban, former automobile registration clerk, was dismissed by Secretary of State Fred R. Zimmerman for "religious and political reasons." This announcement is made in a letter addressed Saturday to Mr. Zimmerman.

The letter also announces that if the commission finds that any religious or political reasons entered into the dismissal it will conclude that the former clerk has not been removed. Another hearing will be held on the question of qualifications of Cobban to continue state service. If it finds that religious and political causes were not responsible for the dismissal, the letter stated.

"If this commission finds that the reasons for the removal of Mr. Cobban were religious or political," the letter declares, "it will be compelled to conclude that there has been in fact no removal and the commission will so certify to the state auditor."

"If, on the contrary, the commission finds that the removal of Mr. Cobban was not for religious or political reasons, it will, on its own motion, make an investigation to determine the fitness of A. J. Cobban to remain upon the eligible list of applicants for positions under the civil service law."

The letter followed claims filed with the commission by Mr. Cobban that the removal was purely for religious and political reasons.

WEBSTER SCHOOL IS VISITED BY NURSE

Miss Grace Amerpohl, city school nurse, has completed the examination of pupils in the Jackson and Garfield schools and began work Monday in the Webster school. The Douglas, vocational and two parochial schools are the only ones remaining after the Webster examinations are completed. Members of the Parent-Teacher associations in the various school districts are co-operating in the copying of records.

SCHOOL FOR DEAF COMMENCEMENT

Delavan—June 6 has been the time set for the formal 1924 commencement for the state school for the deaf, Delavan. The commencement season opened Friday night with the annual gymnasium exhibition. Different school activities will continue at intervals until the formal commencement in June.

Inspected are bonded under the federal warehouse act, which authorized the department of agriculture to license warehouses for the storage of grain, cotton, wool and tobacco. When a license is issued by a warehouse, it is authorized to issue a warehouse receipt indicating the license number, the location of the house, the identification number and the weight and grade of tobacco handled. Such receipts are considered as collateral for loans.

Local Inventors Obtain Patents

O. B. Hjorth, 214 South Third street, has been granted a patent on an invention of a new type of fountain pen. Another Janesville inventor just granted a patent is Alvaro S. Krotz, 353 Sherman avenue, one a tractor plow.

COVER 7,000 MILES ON AUTOMOBILE TRIP

After spending five months on a motor trip to California, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Foster have returned to this city, having covered in all 7,000 miles. They left here Oct. 17 and spent 17 days on the trip to the coast visiting Phoenix, Ariz. and other western cities before going to San Diego, Long Beach and Los Angeles, Cal., where they spent most of the time. Bad roads were encountered on the homeward trip and it was necessary to abandon their car near Shullsburg. Worst roads on the trip were those in Oklahoma, according to Mr. Foster. The return trip was made by way of Texas, Oklahoma and Iowa on the Jefferson highway.

SARTELL LEAVES FOR IOWA TERRITORY

Ervin J. Sartell, former city clerk-treasurer, left Sunday afternoon for Mason City, Ia., as a salesman for the Parker Pen company. His territory is made up of a large portion of that state. Mr. Sartell was honored by the Kiwanis club by being presented with an honorary membership and a pen.

Maxfield is speaker—Judge H. J. Maxfield, Janesville, will go to Brooklyn, Monday night, to speak before the Young Men's Y. M. C. A. banquet in place of the Rev. M. Mieske, Monroe, who is unable to fulfill his engagement because of holding revival services in Judea.

FULL STATE TICKET FOR 3D PARTY

Wisconsin Backers of Farmer-Labor Movement Report Rapid Progress.

Madison—Wisconsin's latest movement for the organization of a new political party is making progress, according to information received here from Hurley E. Nickerson, Milwaukee, manager of the organization committee.

The party will be known as the Farmer Labor, it is said. More than 500 letters have been sent out to farmers and labor leaders in the state regarding the new organization, according to Mr. Nickerson. A conference will be held here the latter part of April to perfect the organization, under present plans. No definite date has been set for the meeting.

"The Farmer-Labor movement is meeting with considerable favor over the state," Mr. Nickerson said while here recently. "Although no definite plans have been worked out as to a date for the state meeting, it is planned to hold it in Madison some time during April. A complete state ticket is the plan of leaders. Letters to obtain sentiment of farmer and labor leaders have been sent out to all parts of the state. From those it is expected an expression as to the best time for holding the conference will be obtained."

Mr. Nickerson said it is the plan of leaders to bring to the state conference two or three Farmer-Labor leaders from Minnesota and other states. Invitations will be extended to several leaders in the near future, he stated. Announcement that the new party would be inaugurated was made here recently by Chester Platt, campaign manager for George F. Comings in his race for the governorship.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

"Then drink it thus," cried the rash young fool and splashed the contents of his cupful into the face of Mr. Wilding even as that gentleman, on his feet, was proposing to drink to the eyes of the young fool's sister . . .

"Mr. Wilding stood still, very still and outwardly impassive, the wine trickling from his long face, which, if pale, was no paler than its habit, a vestige of a smile still lingering on his thin lips, though departed from his eyes . . ."

Thus Sabatini plunges into his latest story, the most stirring tale he has yet written—and the intensity of interest is maintained to the end.

Pick up the story on Wednesday and read how Ruth Westmacott, the fair young heiress, yielded herself in marriage to "Wild Wilding" against her will, in order to save her coward brother's life and honor, and became Mistress Wilding, for whom men longed to fight at the drop of a hat.

Are You an American Citizen?

There is one way to let the world know you are an American citizen: That is by going to the polls on Tuesday, tomorrow, and voting. Do not be one of the $55,000 citizens of Wisconsin who stay at home and let the minority decide elections. The women have a grave responsibility. In their hands is not only the balance of power but power itself. In the municipal election in Janesville they have a responsible position to fill—one of them is by voting at the election and primary tomorrow. Two delegates from this district are to be voted for and they are important. Three members of the city council are to be elected and two supervisors in wards have the endorsement of the women voters' organization of the city. A judge is to be elected for the twelfth circuit. We should keep that position out of the mire of partisan politics and away from legal ignorance or desire to enhance lawlessness and sentiment against the liquor laws. It is no time to trade for uncertainty.

But whatever one may believe in, the failure to go to the polls and vote is a failure in American citizenship.

We would all like to hear old Mother Earth sing. "Wearing of the Green."

The Gloom Spreader's Joy.

The sad faces are happier now than they have been for a long time, since it appears that the nation in which we live and some of native born and naturalized are a part, is on a toboggan going hell bent for the bottom. Once they were mightily cheered by Macaulay's picture of the yellow man sitting amid the ruins of London when the Mongolian and Malay had overcome the world. But facts and time and history have made the yellow peril less vociferous and especially so since we settled the 16 to 1 contest.

Then if one reads the contemporary literature of the time, he will discover that in Grant's administration, when a member of the cabinet was not only under suspicion but had really taken a bribe, and resigned, the situation in the republic made the gloom spreader unspeakably happy. So when in 1924 it was disclosed that the "plum free" had been shaken and some senators had made money out of sugar stock speculations, there was another crack in the nation's foundation. Their fathers and grandfathers had been sure that the nation was about to be totally wrecked when the southern oligarchy in 1859 and 1860 stole about all the country's war material, looted the treasury and divided the republic.

We weathered that; we weathered the Credit Mobilier, the Whiskey Ring frauds, the Star Route frauds, the sugar speculation frauds, the Ballinger case, the "Blocks of Five" election schemes, the Van Allen scandal in contributions to the democratic campaign fund, and all the other lesser ones. And the gloom was replaced by sunshine. So we will weather the Teapot Dome and kindred scandals and go on achieving greatness as a nation.

There is not half as much danger in these scandals which concern a few individuals who will be held up to ignominy and who will fade into a disgraceful oblivion, as there is in the fact that unless we pass an immigration law very soon and make it operative before June 20, 1924, we will be confronted with several million immigrants coming here to swamp the labor market and to upset the whole economic situation in reference to our industrial life. Labor has been so busy talking about Teapot Dome that it has overlooked its impending danger of all gates down.

Let us say in warning that while we have voted for ten million dollars to relieve the German orphan children we will need several times ten millions to relieve our own distress if we permit the fifteen millions of immigrants to get to these shores as fast as ships can bring them here after June 20, and we find ourselves buried under a burden of new peoples who cannot be absorbed.

Italy and Central Europe have waiting, all ready for the movement here, so many people that two Chicago could be made from the number. We can protect ourselves from individual thievery but we would be helpless in the face of this conquering army of invaders.

A scientific sharp says that "isotopes are infinitely more infinitesimal than the atom." In other words they look like Al Smith's chances for the presidency.

What a sight it would be—and sound too—if Gen. Dawes was vice president and presiding over the United States senate!

Any member who wants to stampede the United States senate should introduce the Golden Rule and try to get it passed.

Speak first and think about it afterwards is the rule of the Wheeler committee witnesses.

AS ARTISTS SEE WASHINGTON

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington,—While London, city of smoke and fog, is becoming clearer every day, Washington with its white buildings is falling a prey to grime. The old saying that London climate on a clear day is like looking up a chimney, and London climate on a foggy day is like looking down the chimney, no longer holds true. The famous London fogs are becoming comparatively rare.

The British capital twice some time ago to a realization that smoke annoyed its health and civic attractiveness. An artist, Sir William Richmond, started a smoke abatement society, and since then London factories have been compelled to consume their own smoke.

This is cited as an indication that the British capital is alert to making the most of its aesthetic values. In Washington, however, the capital dome is periodically scrubbed, the war department is sprayed off with a fire department hose, and smoke remains as it is.

A British miniature painter and his wife, an American novelist, have been translating the national capital into their respective arts, and incidentally they have been "seeing Washington" from individual angles.

The painter is Allyn Williams, founder and president of the Royal Society of Miniature Painters which has been responsible for a revival of the delicate art of painting little portraits on ivory. He has painted some of the loveliest women of British and American capitals. His wife, Anna Dorsey Williams, is the author of a novel of Washington life which is to appear this spring. She was born in Washington, and lived for a number of years on Capitol hill and in old Georgetown.

To these two artists Washington appears as a city beautiful, a city of Arabian Nights variety, but a city in considerable danger of being spoiled.

Thus, Mr. Williams looks up from his studio window where he is painting a full length miniature of a Washington beauty, and waves a paint brush toward the new headquarters of the United States Chamber of Commerce, a white stone structure very well in keeping with the colonial and Greek styles of the older government buildings.

A city of white marble against a background of blue sky and green parks and trees is an inspiring plan for a nation's capital, he remarks in British accent, and the plan is being consistently carried out in most of the new public buildings. But white temple-like structures swept by smoke are not so beautiful.

Washington is in grave danger of being commercialized—the novelist contributes to the conversation. It is not a manufacturing city, and probably will never be permitted to become one. But the demand for office space is resulting in more and more ten-story structures which justify the public buildings and shut out the vistas and skylines which make the city a panorama of rest and beauty.

London and Paris sprang up without definite plan for their careers as national capitals. Washington is more fortunate. It has not yet acquired the fascinating mellowness of the old European cities but it has always laid before it the prospect of becoming the modern Athens. Now, commercialism threatens to dwarf the public buildings by towering office buildings, but as a devotee of Washington, Mrs. Williams protests emphatically that laws should prohibit commercial structures from spoiling the effect of the three and four story government buildings.

Here the miniature painter drops his work to aid his plea for an artistic capital. The United States, he believes, should begin building a fine national art collection in Washington, if only for the reason that such a collection would be a valuable adjunct. Old paintings may or may not increase in value, but they are more or less of a gamble. But a wisely chosen collection of modern art is a good business investment for a nation.

France has recognized this. The French government appropriates funds regularly for the purpose of buying the works of modern artists for the Luxembourg gallery in Paris. Artists are willing to sell to the French government at somewhat lower than they quote to private customers here by the Luxembourg. The result of the French policy toward modern art is that modern paintings bought by the government have increased in value from ten to fifty per cent since they were purchased.

This is ordinary business foresight applied to a worth-while purpose. At the same time French artists are encouraged by the government, and the country is making a valuable collection.

The present is regarded as an opportune time for the United States to do likewise. France, Great Britain, and other European nations have little money to spend on art, because of war obligations, and the United States can have its pick of art on the market.

The miniature painter's idea is not only a great feature of a nation's capital, but that the nation's paintings should be at the disposal of the people who can not go to the gallery to see them. That is, it should be possible for exhibits of the paintings to travel to municipal art galleries all over the country.

As transportation and long distance communication develop, the national capital is being brought closer to the people, and its welfare is of more personal interest to them. Not so many years ago, the average government clerk seemed to be a native of Maryland, Virginia, or the District of Columbia. Washington was patently southern in speech and manner.

Washington is still a southern city in some ways. At many boarding house tables the Virginia accent and southern dishes still hold the balance of power. But the war broke up government workers from far corners of the country, and many of them have remained. In addition, there are always the congressional and the foreign diplomatic sets. And now the tourist from anywhere in America on his way to Palm Beach, Newport, or California stops off casually to see the sights of his capital. With so many kaleidoscopic elements of population blended, the city is more truly national and international than ever before.

This complex national scene has been sadly neglected in our American literature. Mrs. Williams thinks. Some outward symbols of the country, such as the White House, politicians, and old Washington residences have been introduced occasionally into romances as local color. But the spirit of Washington, its inner machinery, and its effect on those who live and work and play in the shadow of the public buildings have not been exploited with the thoroughness that the secrets of New York, London, and Paris have been.

Bishop Manning has taboored the barefoot dance in the Episcopal church. He might sprinkle tacks on the stage as a last resort, if they persist.

Maybe Mr. Sinclair believes that silence is golden.

We have so many ways of education nowadays, moving pictures, radio and otherwise, that by and by we may use school houses for education.

THE OLD CRAYON PORTRAIT

The old crayon portrait of father, at last we have put it away. We have stored it high up in the attic, and stored it, I fancy, to stay.

'Tis not that we think less of father, or have ceased to remember his name. 'Tis because we have tired of that picture, and tired of that horrible frame.

I remember the day that we bought it. I remember the man who appeared. And earnestly pleaded with mother—I remember the cut of his beard.

I remember the pictures he showed her; today I can still hear him tell: "I can still hear him tell: 'He could make a father just like them—seven dollars and a half, and she fell!'

She loaned him the group we had taken, with Dad in the center, and he even there looked the smile of good nature which I'd grown accustomed to.

But the man said he'd 've him a twinkle; his forehead had slightly enlarged. And trim up his whiskers a little, and make no additional charge.

Well, he burnished and polished up father, his head he threw up in the air, he gave him a large Adam's apple, and a marvelous necktie to wear.

But never did the crayon artist have known him if the man had told us his name—But when mother had paid for the picture, she went into debt for the frame.

That old crayon portrait of father, at last we have stored it away. It recalled not the father who loved us, but rather the face of his day.

And I think it's as father would wish it—held close to be stored away from the picture. Then that stranger should gaze on his picture and think that he once looked like that! (Copyright, 1924, by Edgar A. Guest)

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, APRIL 1, 1924.

Astrologers read this as rather a doubtful day. While Mercury and the Sun are in benefic aspect, their good influence is counteracted by Saturn in strongly adverse way.

It is a day of the chain-gang for those who have to do with any sort of financial settlements. Bookkeepers and accountants of every rank should benefit from the kindly influence of Mercury.

It is not a favorable rule under which to begin building operations. Journeys come under a lucky direction making for safety and promptness in reaching destinations.

There is a promising sign for all work connected with contracts, advertising, public affairs and educational enterprises.

Saturn is in an aspect threatening to the best interests of farmers. Real estate dealers in various parts of the country also will be affected by this sinister rule.

Again there is indication of strikes and labor difficulties and they will develop unusual features.

The general forecast for business during April is not particularly encouraging, for there are indications of a possible slump in trade.

There is a sign interpreted to give warning that bankers and all who lend money will not be cordial to borrowers.

There is likely to be a general tendency toward the most conservative business methods. There will be a demand for houses and much buying of homes, while automobile dealers are likely to suffer from lack of business.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a quiet year in which they may have some annoyances due to unwise letters or incomplete legal papers.

Children born on this day probably will be extremely fortunate all through life. These subjects of Aries usually have much energy and ambition.

That which is sound in the philosophy of the common mind usually is founded on proverb handed down by the race.

Every people has its own proverbs; yet the proverbs of the various peoples when compared show a remarkable unanimity of common thought.

Take these proverbs, for instance. "They are maxims handed down in China for many centuries, and are believed to be inventions of that race, but they seem as much Oriental as Oriental."

"The greatest conqueror is he who overcomes the enemy without a blow."

Screen the dairy. Show the fly. Guard the baby's milk supply.

FOOD THAT SPAYS BY YOU

There was a newspaper legend several years ago to the effect that John D. Rockefeller thought a whole lot of his first stomach and was willing to pay more than a nickel for a second stomach if he could get one. Well, most of us have a second stomach, most of us have a second stomach, like a cow. I say like a cow—maybe I am wrong about that, but the cow is generally considered several stomachs.

The Chinese legend about doctors as all-around doctors of hearted Professor McElroy got it off in a radio talk about conditions in China only the other day and nobody laughed. Such a legend is an entitled to refer to the cow's stomachs.

Anyhow, most of us humans are equipped with two stomachs virtually and so far as all digestive purposes are concerned. The upper or first stomach is the one we like to blame for a lot of difficulties which really arise from lesions of the lower or second stomach. Most of our food is digested in the upper stomach. With a little special care and protection about feeding, one may worry along for several months or years after the total removal of the upper or first stomach, but with any further delay the second or lower stomach becomes injured or diseased or destroyed life is very difficult. The lower stomach is commonly called the duodenum, and it is here that all carbohydrate food is digested and most of the process of digestion and proteins and fats is conducted. The gastric juice is delivered to the duodenum; so is the bile. These juices are even more essential for digestion than is the gastric juice.

Working people have a conviction that certain foods "stay by you" and they assume that such foods are profitable to maintain strength and warmth and supply muscular energy. A food which stays by literally is longer in the upper stomach. While something remains in the stomach, the normal tone contraction of the empty stomach is postponed and rhythmic spasmodic contractions which are called "acid indigestion" are delayed. So the food that "stands by you" is the food that puts off your appetite for hunger for a longer time.

It is not a matter that gives you any more strength or energy than food which leaves the stomach in a shorter time.

Protein foods, meats, cereals, whole eggs, fish, pears, apples, nuts remain longer in the upper stomach than carbohydrates (bread, cereals, starchy vegetables, sugars and sweets) do, but once for cause the carbohydrates which are called "acid indigestion" are delayed. So the food that "stands by you" is the food that puts off your appetite for hunger for a longer time.

Q. What is the meaning of the inscription on the walls of the Amphitheatre at Arlington, "When we are called to the front, we will not be there?"

A. They were the words of George Washington and were uttered for the purpose of reassuring the New York people of the country of those days should have no fear lest he and his army would not otherwise than to secure and to preserve the liberties of the people. And it was said by William Blackstone some time later who expressed much the same thought as Washington, but in these words: "He must not let the citizen when enters the camp, but it is because he is a citizen and would wish to continue so that he makes of himself for a while a soldier."

Q. What variety of strawberry was the first grown for commercial use in the United States? A. E. R.

A. The large Early Scarlet was the leading variety of strawberry grown from the beginning of commercial strawberry growing about 1800 until about 1860. As this variety was too soft to ship to distant markets, other varieties suitable for various climatic conditions have displaced it.

Q. How many Catholics are there in England and Wales? A. B.

A. The Roman Catholic population of England and Wales is 1,900,000, approximately 5 per cent of the total population.

Q. How large was a steamer trunk in 1840? A. W. C.

A. A steamer trunk can be 26 by 24 by 14 inches in order to fit into a steamer trunk.

Q. When was the first homestead taken up in the United States? H. P.

A. The first homestead entry was made by Daniel A. Freeman on Jan. 1, 1850, near Centerville, Neb.

Q. When was the University of the Philippines established? W. C.

A. The University of the Philippines was founded by the legislature in 1908 at Manila. It contains a college of liberal arts, a college of medicine, a college of law, a school of education, school of fine arts, and a school of agriculture. The annual enrollment is about 750.

Application of political remedies for economic ills is said to be the cause of the Mexican situation, in a new book, "Trading With Mexico," by Wallace Thompson, placed in the public library for circulation this week. The book is filled with facts about present Mexico and the author suggests a remedy for the situation, to be brought about through co-operation of business men of the two countries.

As a valuable addition to the several new books on angling which have been added to the library collection recently, "The Book of the Pike," by the Rev. O. W. "Claude" Smith, of Evansville, fishing editor of "Out-door Life," and author of several volumes on the same subject, will be interesting as the only book on that subject in the library.

THE MOTORIST buys gasoline at frequent intervals and pays cash for it, because the unit of purchase is small.

For this reason the price of gasoline is ever-present in his mind.

But, in fairness, the price of gasoline should be considered in relation to other fixed charges incident to the operation of his automobile.

Petroleum Age, in its issue of February 1, 1924, states that "reliable figures obtained in the study of the operation cost of automobiles in oil field service between July, 1922, and July, 1923, shows that the average cost per mile for cars ranging in price from $400.00 to $1,400.00 each was 10c. During that period approximately 22c per gallon was paid for gasoline."

"Not so much as I want to know. What you got up your sleeve?" "Only my arm," was his flippant reply. "You know you don't expect those deputies to get Pap, in spite of what you told the sheriff. What's your plan?" "Bill, when you noticed my shirt waist was ripped back there at the bank, did you wonder anything?" "Any more for instance?" "Your back's pretty well marked," he said diffidently. Then as she kept silent, he added, "How did it happen?" She told him, concluding with, "I'll carry the marks to my dying day. But I'll make Pap pay for what he did to me. It's the last thing I do."

He gave a sober nod that revealed no hint of the flame within. A mile whip scoring that fouler flesh, a mile whip in the hands of Pap Hawkins! Killing was the most obvious justice for such a person. But he did not want Dolly to perform the killing.

"Then telling the sheriff about Pap's coming to the ranch was a bluff?" he hazarded.

"That's all I'm going to tell you," she said, "and nothing else from Mont before I get there—something you didn't tell either me or the sheriff? I'll bet you know what Pap's language was." "Maybe I do, and maybe I don't. Anyway, I'm getting sleepy. Good Lord, Bill, look at the clock—three in the morning! We've been sitting here for hours! What will Miss Dolan say? Come on, get up, drag it, shoe, here's your hat! No, not another word. Come and stand tomorrow afternoon if you still want to argue with me."

She almost pushed him out of the judge's kitchen and slipped home the bolt with a sense of relief. There was too good a guesser. Equally was it impossible to ask him anything about Last Cabin. The nearest mention of her name was a hushed word, "Dolly," and she would have pounced like a hawk.

Her aunt had said Pap would not come to the ranch for ten days. This gave her more than a week to find out the location of Last Cabin. She felt, as she sat on the edge of her bed and pulled off her stockings, that she was waiting the end of her quest. Then, as she lay down, she remembered the judge's arch-crooked, through the slits of a window. The thought gave her not a quiver but instead an exciting pleasure. ## Dinner Stories

Mickey and Patsy had been schoolmates together, but they had drifted apart in after life. They met one day, and the conversation turned on athletics.

"Did you ever meet my brother Dem?"

"No," asked Pat. "He has just won a gold medal in a foot race."

"Indeed?" replied Mickey. "Sure, and that's fine. But did I ever tell you about my uncle at Ballyclun?"

"I don't remember," replied Pat.

"Well," said Mickey, "he's got a gold medal for five miles, and one for ten miles, two sets of canvas for cycling, a silver medal for swimming, two cups for wrestling, and a badge for boxing."

"No wonder," said Pat, "he must have been a wonderful athlete, indeed."

"Sure, and he's no athlete at all!" Pat said, "he's a pish!"

A small storekeeper, much to the amusement of his neighbors, suddenly decorated his shop window with a sign that read, "Last Cabin." It was the sensation of the day, and few of his brethren failed to make some remark to him about it.

"What a fine sign you've got there, Dem," said one of the neighbors.

"Yes, indeed," said Mickey, "it's a fine sign. I put a little box on my counter 'For the Blind,' and they said 'Last Cabin'."

TUBBY

I WAS READIN' LAST NIGHT ABOUT A HERMIT THAT LIVED ALL ALONE BY HIMSELF IN A CLE OUT ON THE MOUNTAINS—GEE! I WOULDN'T LIVE THERE FOR A MILLION DOLLARS

THAT'S NOTHING! I'M GONNA LIVE IN THAT SHACK OUT IN OUR YARD I'M GONNA START STAYIN' OUT THERE RIGHT NOW, TONIGHT

AW, I BETCHA YOU DON'T

WELL, I BETCHA I DO TOO, I'M GONNA TAKE MY BOOKS OUT THERE AND LIVE ALL ALONE, ALL THE TIME, NOBODY'LL EVER SEE ME, NOT EVEN MY OWN MOTHER

GEE WHIZZERS, WON'T YOU BE AFRAID TO STAY OUT IN THAT OLE SHED ALL NIGHT BY YOURSELF?

OH, I'LL SLEEP IN THE HOUSE

THE END
